

Team

For the Seeded stage, the checklist is largely cleared by the group formation and assignment definition from the teachers. Other items were checked off by the Code of Conduct. The team, has also reached the Forming stage as these items were all cleared before or during the first assignment. By this assignment, the team is comfortably in the Collaborating stage as we now have experience working together. This can be seen in how we in this project made more use of each individual's skills. For example, Maegan was the one responsible for the Frontend part of the server since she was the only one who knew HTML since before and felt the most comfortable doing that part. This could also be used to argue for us being in the Performing stage. We check all items in this stage as we in this project have been truly comfortable working together.

The next stage is Adjourned. This is the stage the team will presumably be in after this assignment, before forming new groups. To reach this stage it would be good for the team to reflect on their contributions and performance and what they will bring with them to their new working conditions, but it is not necessarily required.
